AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS
666 FIFTH AVE. • NEW YORK, N. Y. 10019

*Copyright 1969 by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, Inc.

FOREWORD

For the first time this geographical list of accounting firms and individual practitioners includes only firms all of whose partners are members of the Institute. Formerly, firms were listed if one or more partners were members. The change in policy was adopted by the executive committee to prevent the possibility of any misunderstanding about the nature of the list.

In determining which firms were eligible for listing under the new policy, the staff has necessarily relied on information supplied by members.

An asterisk (*) before a name denotes membership in the Accounting Research Association. Dues paid to the ARA are used to finance the accounting research program of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

Offices in Okinawa, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are shown near the end of the list. Those in foreign countries are not included.

An alphabetical directory of all members and associates is scheduled to be published in 1969.

A FEW FACTS ABOUT CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS

As its name implies, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants admits only CPAs to membership. First licensed in 1896 in New York, CPAs are members of a fast-growing profession which has nearly tripled in two decades (to an estimated 107,000). It is expected that the number will increase to more than 140,000 by 1975.

COMPETENCE

In order to become a CPA, one must satisfy education and experience requirements, specified by state law, and pass a difficult two-and-a-half-day written examination. The examination is prepared by the American Institute and is uniform in all states, territories and the District of Columbia.

Currently, almost 95 per cent of successful CPA candidates are college graduates.

PROFESSIONAL ETHICS

CPAs are subject to discipline under state laws or rules promulgated by state boards of accountancy. In addition, the individual practitioners and firms listed in this directory are also subject to the American Institute's Code of Professional Ethics. The Code contains twenty-one rules. Those of special interest to credit grantors and others who rely upon the profession are summarized as follows:

Independence. A member shall not express an opinion on the financial statements of an enterprise unless he is independent in fact and in appearance. All relationships with a client should be assessed with this in mind.

A member is not considered independent, for example, if he has any financial interest in, or is an officer, director, or key employee of an enterprise being audited.

Technical Standards. Before expressing an opinion on financial statements, a member must make an examination in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and must satisfy himself that the client has followed generally accepted accounting principles. In addition, he must acquire sufficient information to warrant the expression of an opinion and must make all disclosures necessary so that the statements are not misleading.

Accounting principles and auditing standards are described in bulletins of the Institute which are available. Among other things, observation of inventories and confirmation of receivables are usually required when an opinion is given.

Reporting Standards. A member shall not permit his name to be associated with financial statements unless he either (a) expresses an opinion or (b) disclaims an opinion and explains why (for example, because the scope of his examination has been limited by the client), or (c) marks the statements as unaudited. (The auditing procedure committee of the Institute feels that where no opinion is expressed, a specific disclaimer should be issued. While not yet a specific requirement of the Code, this standard is generally followed.)

A member may express a qualified opinion, so long as his exceptions are not so material as to negate the opinion as a whole. (For example, if inventory and receivables are material in relation to total assets, and he has not examined them, he may not express a qualified opinion, but must disclaim an opinion and explain why.) Advertising and Solicitation of professional engagements is not permitted.

Members may not accept engagements on a contingent fee basis, and may not violate the confidential relationship between themselves and their clients.

Copies of a booklet containing the Institute's Code of Professional Ethics, as well as Opinions of its committee on professional ethics, are available on request.

ENFORCEMENT

Complaints alleging violation of the Code of Professional Ethics are accepted by the Institute from any source. Names of complainants are held in confidence. If, after investigation, the committee on professional ethics believes a violation has occurred, the respondent is summoned before the Trial Board. If found guilty, he may be admonished, suspended or expelled from Institute membership.

State CPA societies have similar disciplinary machinery.

State boards of accountancy may suspend or revoke CPA certificates for violation of provisions in state accountancy laws or rules of conduct of the regulatory board.

The Institute welcomes inquiries on any aspect of ethical conduct, and will fully respect confidences when requested.

ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES BOARD

The Institute's Accounting Principles Board is the profession's leading authority on what constitutes "generally accepted accounting principles." The Board considers studies published by the Institute's professional research staff and then makes pronouncements as to the accounting treatment which should be applied.

The governing Council has resolved that members should see to it that departures from the Board's pronouncements are disclosed either in the auditor's report or in footnotes to the financial statements. Wherever practicable the financial effect also should be reported.

A booklet describing the objectives and procedures of the Board is available upon request.

PRACTICE REVIEW BOARD

This Board will review reports by CPAs received from any source on a confidential basis, and will point out any departures from standards to the CPA concerned. Names of persons submitting the reports will not be disclosed.

THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE

The American Institute was organized in 1887—nine years before the first CPA law was passed—as the American Association of Public Accountants. It now has more than 65,000 members.

At present, sixty-five AICPA boards and committees are studying various aspects of the profession.

In addition to preparing the CPA examination and maintaining its Code of Professional Ethics, the American Institute performs such services as: providing professional development courses to keep practicing CPAs abreast of new accounting developments, aiding government agencies on accounting matters, and assisting members with technical problems.

It also publishes America's leading accounting periodical—The Journal of Accountancy—and Management Services, a bi-monthly magazine. The Journal has a circulation of over 122,000 accountants, business managers, government officials and educators.

The Institute's headquarters—at 666 Fifth Avenue, New York—has one of the largest and most comprehensive libraries on accounting in the world.

In addition to the Institute, most CPAs belong to a state society. While not formerly affiliated with the Institute, the state societies work closely with the national body.
